He will talk at 8 p.m. in Goodwin Stadium at Arizona State University and before a noon luncheon of the Phoenix Kiwanis Club in the Smokehouse Restaurant, 4701 N. 16th St.

King is appearing here under the auspices of the Maricopa County branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Camp Sets New Policy

A new enrollment policy and several other new features will mark this summer's session of Camp Gompers' summer program for physically handicapped children.

Mrs. Monica Baird, executive director of the Samuel Gompers Memorial Rehabilitation Center, which sponsors the camp, said all disabled children in the Valley may enroll this year. Last year, only children enrolled at the center were eligible.

Younger children, from 6 to 9, will meet on Tuesday and Thursday mornings. An older group, ages 10 to 14, will meet on Wednesday and Friday mornings. The six-week session will run from June 15 to July 24.

New features, in addition to the usual crafts and games, will include organizing a band, producing a play, and dancing for those who are able charge at the Goodwin Stadium appearance, Ragsdale said, although donations will be welcome. King's speech before the Kiwanis Club also will include an audience of Phoenix civic leaders, according to Mrs. Goldman.

Officials said King's appearance replaces an earlier announced visit on May 27.

KING was named Time Magazine's man of the year for 1963. He also is a nominee for the Nobel Peace Prize.

Ragsdale said no civil rights demonstrations are planned in connection with Dr. King's appearance.

Mrs. Goldman said members of the Volunteer Executive Committee, composed of interested Phoenix residents, include Ray Kandel, Mrs. Richard Wilks, R. M. D. Wagers, Rev. George Brooks, Robert Choate, Dr. Augusto Ortiz, Mrs. Archie Walker, Mrs. Ruth McGregor and Ragsdale.

Five Proposals Recommended To Beef up Prices of Cattle

WASHINGTON (AP) — A national advisory committee on cattle yesterday recommended a five-fold government program to strengthen depressed prices of American beef cattle.

The 38-member group, called into session Monday by Secretary of Agriculture Orville L. Freeman, emphasized that the government should seek to reduce imports of beef to the maximum extent possible through voluntary negotiations with exporting nations.

The cattle-price situation poses political and economic problems for the Johnson administration in this presidential election year.

Yesterday's recommendations undoubtedly will be considered by the administration in making decisions on future actions.

The recommendations also call for industry-government cooperation to promote commercial sales of cattle and beef abroad, particularly in Europe, which is faced with a temporary shortage. The Committee would use government funds received from sale of surplus commodities to help promote markets.

Voted down by a wide margin was a proposal advanced by some farm groups, including the National Farmers Union, that the government offer incentive payments to stimulate marketings of lightweight cattle.

The committee also urged that the department continue its current beef surplus purchase
